1804 DOLLAR.

So much has been said about the last 1804 Dollar, which changed hands in January last, and so many articles have appeared in newspapers and periodicals concerning it, that I feel inclined to tell the part I took in it.

The Dollar was first offered in a sale in Berlin, held by the late Adolph Weyl, and was purchased on an order from this country. It shortly afterwards appeared in Philadelphia (in 1886,) and was purchased by Mr. J. B. Dexter, of Denver, Colo. Mr. Dexter died a few years ago and his widow sold it to Mr. Parvin. This gentleman had much correspondence with various parties who desired to purchase it, but until Mr. H. G. Brown of Portland, Oregon, communicated with him on the subject, no serious negotiations were entered into. The piece was finally forwarded to Mr. Brown, who was allowed 60 days for consideration and opportunity to verify its pedigree, and to become assured of its genuineness. Mr. Brown forwarded the coin to me for my critical opinion.

I found the coin had all the peculiarities of this particular and excessively rare issue of 1804, and I also recognized it as the identical one which was purchased by Mr. Dexter, and as the No. 12 of the 13 specimens known, of which Mr. Jno. A. Nexsen printed in the Journal of Numismatics a most carefully prepared list, and to whom I had the pleasure of showing the piece.
